Mr Manager,

I am writing this letter to complain about the quality of your company's work several weeks ago, on 7 January 2019, during my move. The service was terrible, consequently your company's "guarantee of satisfaction" had not worked, although it was promised to make your clients satisfied with your service.

To begin with, several items of mine, including two tables and five chairs, were broken. It can be concluded that it was your company that damaged my furniture. Moreover, when I found out that the company had damaged the items, I called to one of your managers asking to find a solution to this problem. But I did not get any answer. It is now almost 4 weeks since the move, and I find it outrageous to ignore my complaint.

Hence I am asking you to take appropriate action. First of all, replacement of the broken furniture will cost $70. Provided that you take action immediately, I will not ask extra $10 for waiting for your company's response. If nothing is changed, and I do not get my money back, I will have to speak with your boss directly.

Sincerely,

Ann

To: removals company.

Dear director of the company,

I am writing you in order to inform ~~(that)~~ about some complaints regarding to the quality of work done by the company's workers. To be more precise, I want to mention some details and so make my complaint clear to you. 18

First of all, the day when the workers ~~(had)~~ came for removals dates back to ~~January~~ January 15th. The problem is that several items, including some expensive furniture, were broken. At this point I want to point out that I had signed the contract or "guarantee of satisfaction," according to which the firm takes responsibility for their work. However, since I haven't been able to reach you (as you haven't got back to my requests), I can conceive that you have been successfully ignoring me all this time. I am strongly recommend you to answer this letter and take the responsibility for your work or I will have to go to the court. 155

The list of items damaged: the television (the large crack on the screen), the broken old vase and glasses.

The replacement will cost you approximately 1000$. I can present you all the receipts as a proof.

In this situation the appropriate decision is to take adequate measures and pay me off. 100

Respect fully,

Alysa Sh.

Dear Mr or Mrs,
I would like to make a complaint on your bad service. First of all, I should remind you about your 'guarantee of satisfaction' that includes some options linked to the goods ^{and money} refund. Last week I moved house. I was partly satisfied because of some drawbacks.

Dear Mr or Mrs,
I would like to make a complaint on your bad service. First of all, I should remind you about your 'guarantee of satisfaction' which includes some options linked to the goods and money refund, however I was not provided with this free option.

Last ^{month} week I moved house and a few items (a fridge, a sofa and a desk) were damaged. I have already spoken to your manager about it but any actions from you have not been taken. My damaged items are pretty expensive and it might cost me about 2000 pounds to replace them. I suppose, you understand that I want your company to fix this bad situation.

I am not a fussy customer. I mean that both options: replacement of my broken goods or money refund are suitable for me. I hope, you will answer as soon as possible and I will not need to write a complaint in ^{the} trial.

Let us not ^{lose} ~~lose~~ problems each other and solve this misunderstanding. I will wait ^{for} your letter on this e-mail address, or you can find my phone number ~~in~~ in your customer base and call me; we will go through the details of my complaint.

Yours Faithfully,

Daria

1st Dear Ms,

1st I am writing to complain about your company's actions which turned out to be very unpleasant for me.

1st 1st Two weeks ago I moved house and I hired your removal firm to help me with it. Unfortunately, some of the items turned out to be broken. The things are: a TV, a small refrigerator and a painting which is a heirloom from my ancestors. The painting is fully ripped off which is unacceptable, this thing is the essential one for me and my family. I've been told by the repair firm that it's impossible to do something with the TV and the fridge but to replace them. All in all, it will cost me for about $2000.

1st 1st As I have the company's written "guarantee of satisfaction", I wish you could do something with it. As the repairment is impossible, I'd hazard a guess that we have to divide the replacement costs.

1st 1st 1st I've already spoken with your company about the issue but nothing has changed. I am begging you to do your job and prove the "guarantee of satisfaction". Not only the things I said before are broken, most of the thing items are damaged, hence we must reach the compromise and deal with it as soon as possible. Sending you all the contacts for the cooperation and proofs with the letter.

Your faithfully,

Irina

Dear Mr or Ms,

This is a complaint letter to your company because some of your services turned out to be quite disappointing and personal meeting with manager did not solve the problem.

On January 11th I have moved house and recruited your employees to take care of transferring my furniture and other valuable objects. Sadly, during the process a few of them were damaged and I am convinced that your company is responsible for that. I am sending you a document signed by me and your employee that ensures that all the transferring items were in full order before the transportation. When they arrived, I have noticed that some of them were damaged: two kitchen chairs were broken and bedroom curtains were ripped.

I have been given a written guarantee of satisfaction that was supposed to protect my items, but it did not. Replacing of these items will cost me around hundred (dollars) euros and I am greatly disappointed in that fact.

As your loyal customer who have used your services three times already I was not confronted with such problems before so I don't want to involve court.

I politely ask you to compensate the damage by paying the price of broken objects which in total is 129 euros

I will be waiting for your answer,

Ruby Godwell

log? { During the period from 7th to 15th of January 2019 You have been moving my house to a new place by a standard contract with a written guarantee of satisfaction (copy of which is sent with this letter) During the move, several items, that you are responsible for, were broken. They are: 48-inch TV, 5 silver candlesticks, 2 book shelves, ur lamp, flowerpot and a XIXth-century wardrobe. Replacing them will cost about 1150 £ (one thousand one hundred and fifty pounds). I have already spoken to your manager and he promised that I'll get your official reply in two weeks, but 21 days has passed, and I still haven't got it.

Dear removal company,

I write you due to my own possessions which were badly damaged during their removing by your company several weeks ago. Among the damaged things there are one TV with its broken screen one coffee table with curved glass two oak chairs and one leather sofa with its changed colour. All of them cost one thousand and two hundred dollars in total. The documents proving its price I enclosed with this complaint.

As you know I talked with your company on the same topic a few weeks ago but I still have no fee for things broken. According to the company's "guarantee of satisfaction", I have all the rights to complain a court about your company if I do not get money back for damaged possessions you remove because your company is responsible for its safety. In this case, I require from your company to pay me money back for things broken equally their value or I will have to direct my complaint to a court.
