Bad example is good for you.

There are a lot of Russian fairy-tales about strong, powerful and brave warriors, who protect our country from evil. These fairy-tales can be called a "good examples", because they teach people of what qualities their character should have. However, some of the fairy-tales of our country do not portray their characters as flawless heroes, they do a completely opposite thing by giving characters all of the bad qualities. These are called the "bad examples" and they teach children not to be like the character, but to be different from them.

The fairy-tale about "Ivanushka Durachen" or Ivanushka the Fool describes it's main character as an extremely lazy person, who does not even stand up from the chimney where he sleeps. All he does is lay there and do nothing. Everyone calls him "fool", because he is uneducated. Ivanushka is portrayed as an anti-hero that young people should not look up to.

Fairy-tales that we read or hear from our parents at young age play huge role in forming our character. They set an example of what we should or should not be like. Fairy tales of our country gave me a lot of knowledge about what is good and what is bad in life at a very young age. The fairy-tale about Ivanushka the Fool taught me that laziness is very dangerous and should be judged. The fairy-tale about golden fish that makes people's wishes come true taught me that nothing comes for free and you should work hard if you want to achieve success. A lesson that these fairy-tales had taught me ~~helped me~~ helps me to this day.

In conclusion, I would like to point out that fairy-tales are are significant for forming our character.

and personality. I believe that "bad examples" in fairy-tales are more effective than the "good" ones, because fairy-tale should teach a moral lesson and moral consists of not only good, but bad and evil things too

"Just a fairy-tale"

As the title says, the majority of people underestimate the value of the folklore nowadays. Nevertheless, it is one of the largest part of the Russian oral art which is shared by one generation to another. Fairy-tales are told not only in entertaining purposes but to start the process of setting up mindset and personality from the childhood. Each legend and myth has an aim to tell us something ~~by showing~~ in the simplest way so even a child would understand it. The most of fairy-tales speak about being kind, strong and patriotic. So do my favorite Russian fairy-tales about mighty men, known as bogatirs.

The stories tell us about the great adventures of the strong bogatirs who are not terrified by magical creatures and villains facing them on their way. The trio protects their motherland, The Russ, fearlessly and willingly to die for it. This is the representation of the true patriotism. In my opinion, it has a huge impact on boys mindset, because, firstly, the main characters are men, and the boys feel like it is what a perfect Russian man look and behave like, secondly, they are amazed by the marvelous adventures and wish they fought a dragon as well. In fact, males who were raised with the fairy-tales about mighty bogatirs present qualities like strength, kindness and love for the country. The great example is my little brother who enjoys listening to our grandmother's stories. One day I witnessed a scene where he grabbed our cat who bit his older sister and shouted: "Don't you dare hurting her, you, abnoxious dragon!" Everybody laughed out loud, and I came up to the thought that our family is safe with this "bogatic".

In conclusion, I'd like to say that even if the fairy-tales were made far long time ago, they still have a huge influence on our minds. They are not just fairy-tales but our future.

Every single one of us once was a child. That was the time when our parents read us different fairy-tales before we went to bed. But as children we never really thought about the meaning of those stories. It was beyond our imagination that they can not only entertain us, but also influence our life by forming our character.

sp A fairy-tale that formed my character was written by famous Russian poet Alexander Pushkin. To make a long story short, it is about how you should be careful with what you wish for. In this tale the wife of the ~~main~~ character always wanted too much, ~~thing~~ and that was the reason why in the end she was left with nothing. I admire this story because it has a deep meaning and it teaches people to value everything they have.

Fairy-tales, as well as legends and myths, can have a huge impact on one's personality. For example, my friend Katerina never paid attention to tales. She considered them to be for children only. But she never noticed how she behaved. She never appreciated what she already had, and I told her that she reminded me of an ~~the~~ old woman from Pushkin's tale. She didn't believe me at first, but when I re-told the plot, she recognised herself in that lady. That tale made her realise that her behavior was wrong and it ~~could~~ that if she continued to act the same, she might end up like the woman from the story.

In conclusion, I would like to say that fairy-tales, legends and myths ~~do~~ affect us in different ways. Sometimes you can't notice the influence, and sometimes these stories change your whole life. They contain a lot inside themselves, and that's a good reason to love them.

A Bed-time Story for All the Ages

Despite ~~so~~ many ^{other} aspects of our life, I believe that works of literature, and, more specifically, folk fairy-tales, legends and myths, are what unites and 'bonds' Russians indeed and, what goes without saying, is a part of our legacy. It is something that ~~be~~ all of ~~us~~ grow with and adhere to in our childhood. At the same time, it may get one acquainted with ^{the} Russian culture and its origins. Both captivating and simple in understanding, Russian fairy-tales, legends and myths cannot leave anyone indifferent and, undoubtedly, give food ~~for~~ thought.

As a child, I was particularly astonished by one fairy tale called 'Gusi-Lebedi'. This story is devoted to a little journey where the character faces a lot of difficulties, ~~and~~ meets incredible creatures and gets help from where ~~you~~ ^{you} least expects it. While reading the tale a young reader get acquainted with many Russian beliefs, traditions and, for what I truly appreciate the story, ideas ^{which} concern moral and ethical values. Gr

Apparently, you can come across these so-called 'prominent' ideas in most of Russian fairy tales, legends or myths. Starting ^{from} ~~the~~ ^{the} ~~known~~ ^{known} 'Kolobok' ~~where~~ in L+L which a sly and cunning fox encourages children to be more careful and finishing with ~~the~~ ^{the} ~~known~~ ^{known} some fundamental works as 'The Word about Igor's Troop' which depicts ~~historical~~ ^{historical} figures and battles.

L ~~Since~~ ^{Since} our childhood years these stories ~~have~~ ^{have} ~~taught~~ ^{been teaching} us to be brave, loyal, smart, responsible, sympathetic, generous and, first and foremost, kind.

Therefore, you should definitely opt for ^{the} Russian folk literature if you are to read a bed-time story ~~to~~ to your siblings. Perhaps, children will not be the only ones who ~~will~~ have a hard time putting ~~the~~^a book down.

You get What You Are Grateful For

Have you ever wanted your life to be changed without your efforts? I bet you have. I'm not going to tell you that we get what we deserve, it's such a cliché. Sometimes we just get lucky. But can we be lucky without appreciating it?

In Russia, the country where I live, there is a beautiful story, "A Fairy-tale About a ~~Fish~~ Fisherman And a Fish". It's about an old couple - Starich and Starukha - and a magical Gold Fish. One day Fisherman catches the Gold Fish. She begs him to set her free, promising to make his wishes come true. He told his wife about it, and she made him go and ask the Fish for many things. In the end, the Fish got tired of numerous and, truth be told, ^{Starukha's} dumb wishes, and took everything given before. Starukha was left to enjoy the very same nothing she used to have.

I've always hated this Starukha. Not only was she greedy, but also nasty to her husband. However, I love this story. It both teaches to know when to stop and shows that sometimes all we have to do to keep the things given us by luck is to be grateful. Moreover, ~~as~~ it shows us that the kindness is always rewarded.

Fairy-tales are the best teachers for children. Every kid likes listening to stories, and while doing it he or she is ~~teaching~~ learning the basic rules of being a human. For example, I know a girl who wouldn't stop asking her parents to buy her new toys... until she heard the above-mentioned story.

All in all, there are two things that I love. First one is my life. The second one is a good story. In most cases, they are ~~the~~ synonyms. So, don't be greedy, make sure you are grateful to everybody for everything, appreciate ~~your~~ ^{luck} ~~to the~~ gifts of ~~you~~ ~~your destiny~~... and do read this fairy-tale! 323

A fairy-tale about the round bread.

Nowadays children have become less interested in fairy-tales, legends and myths than a few years ago. Because of a fast technological progress, children pay more attention to others forms of entertainment, such as TV and the Internet. They would rather surf the net or watch a film than read or listen to a fairy-tale. That is quite sad, because the legends and fairy-tales play a very big role in forming child's character by showing the basics of morale.

For example, in my case, my favourite and at the same time the most impactful fairy-tale is called "Kolobok". It's about a round bread that ran away from its creators. It may sound funny, but that tale is indeed very interesting and important to me, because it brings up such problem as being too naive and self-confident. As I have already said this tale is about ^{a journey of} the round bread that manages to escape from different dangerous situations like being eaten by a bear. But because of the success it becomes too self-confident and is easily tricked and eaten by a fox.

Fairy-tales, legends and myths, in general, teach people how to act in different situations, what is good and bad by doing that they build up people's personality. For example, my little sister started to act more mature and responsible after I read her a story about the little brave girl who ~~was~~ managed to save her brother.

Making a conclusion, fairy-tales, legends and myths are very helpful in forming child's character. Moreover, they help to develop children's imagination which is always a great thing. That is why I think fairy-tales are so important.

Tatar mermaid

Gr Have you ever been at swamp? I think your answer is no. So today I wanna tell you, Little kids, about scary creature that lives in Tatarstan's swamps and lakes. Its name is 'Su Anasi'.

L It is a beautiful mermaid with green hair. Every day she sings pretty songs in order to call people. At the same time she grooms her hair by a golden comb. And there exists a fairy-tale that one boy saw this mermaid and decided to steal a comb, because he was very poor. He waited until 'Su Anasi' went to swim, grabbed the comb and ran away, but he didn't even think that mermaid will revenge! She came to his home at night and ~~kn~~ knocked at the window, but the boy didn't open it, because he was very scared and, finally, his mother returned it. I decided to tell you this tale, because it is my favourite story about revenge to stealing. And I hope that none of you, kids, will become a robber.

This is one of the most famous fairy-tales in our country, and I think that every parent should tell it to his child, because the importance of this story is very big. Kids will learn that stealing something is a ~~bad~~ bad decision. In real life they will be punished by a law. For example, I have friend, who had stolen a book with fairy-tales, including story about Su Anasi. He read it and understood that he had made a wrong thing. The next day my friend returned the book to a shop. He got a lesson from this fairy-tale.

Finally, I want to say that stealing anything is ~~every~~ bad and this fairy-tale taught me and other people to make good things. So I think that fairy-tales make a big impact on people.

Olga's revenge. What makes your character.

Growing in a certain country among the people of certain culture has its impact on one's character. Through hearing fairy-tales and legends from parents little children learn about good and evil forces and try to become as kind, strong and clever as the story's characters, developing certain features and traits and then keeping them for the whole life. That is why fairy-tales, legends and myths do influence our character.

Personally, I have experienced an impact from the legend about Olga's revenge. The story says about a Russian princess, who managed to defeat her enemies, a so called ~~Brevlyan~~ Drevlyan tribe. For killing ^{Olga's} husband and being disobedient Drevlyans were killed in a number of complexed ways. Not only did Olga defeat the tribe with her force, but mostly with her nature of a witty person. The princess is an example of a strong smart woman, inspiring us to fight all the difficulties — and that is why I have chosen this legend to describe.

Such stories are necessary for developing our own behaviour. By marking characters as bad, good, strong or kind they have been giving us role-models from the very childhood. Children's minds, prone to get biased, define the beloved characters's features as the right ones, teaching the children the best. If you need an example, which would prove my words, look outside. Both kids and adults are not only rationally cautious about being on the streets, when it is dark. Still they remember the stories about dreadful monsters hiding in the darkness and the memories of the fairy-tales help people keep safe.

In conclusion, I want to say that legends, fairy-tales and myths set examples of certain behaviour showing us what is right and thus developing our character, so their importance and impact on us are obvious.

Odd stories as a part of the system of values.

It is not a secret that every country has its own unique culture that includes different myths, legends and fairy-tales. But what if this part of culture has a great impact on our character and personality? It means that all these peculiar stories teach us how to live, what kind of person to be and how to act in different situations.

To begin with, my favourite legend is about a young boy and wolves. The boy had to take care of a dozen of sheep while they walked and ate grass. It was a simple business, wasn't it? Although the boy got tired and decided to do something to attract himself. So he made up his mind to pretend that wolves had attacked the sheep. A lot of people from the nearby settlement came up to protect the boy and animals. But at the very moment he burst out laughing at them. Some time later wolves really began eating his sheep but he couldn't ask anybody to help him. Nobody wanted to do it because he was known to be a liar. I like this story because it shows people all the drawbacks of telling lies.

As you could understand, myths, legends and fairy-tales have a moral. They are usually deliberately told to children by their parents. So we know almost all of them since childhood. I believe, it happens because it's easy to understand something when you see the example. Moreover, children usually take everything close to heart and receive all the qualities promoted in stories. So when children become adults, they lep carry on valuing these use ful ~~stories~~ qualities. It means that fairy-tales, myths and legends has an impact on all the parts of society.

To sum up, I can only advise you not to forget or ignore this part of our culture because it surely only helps us to stay intelligent and kind to each other.

? title?

It goes without saying, that irrespective of time these have always been and will be a number of various Fairy-tales, legends and myths in any country. Speaking about ~~my home-land~~ the stories of my home-land, I would like to point out, that the majority of them describe the exploits of Gods, Holy people and even heroes. But still, I am sure, that the most touching and ~~interest~~ ^{marvellous} are Fairy-tale about the love between the simple girl and prince. Thus

Thus, I would like to tell you about my favourite story. It is about the young ^{intelligent} ~~woman~~ Vasilisa and her husband the prince Ivan. If I am not mistaken, Vasilisa was ~~the~~ ^{stolen} by the old, evil magician. Therefore, Ivan did everything in his power to save his wife and regain trust.

I believe, that this very story is popular with not only children, but also the youth and older generations. I have chosen this ~~story~~ Fairy-tale, because irrespective of time it helps ~~us~~ to appreciate beauty, to solve the eternal problems of good and bad, makes us both cry and laugh, experience aesthetic pleasure from the distinguished plot. I really can not help loving it.

Frankly speaking, I guess, that thanks to this fairy-tale my brother became the intelligent, patient, warm-heartedness and kindness teacher, who does his best for the younger generations.

To sum up, I would rather say, that the lessons of honesty, sympathy and resistance will never slip into oblivion and will never lose their relevance and charm.

Legends affect our minds?

In every ~~cant~~ culture we have such things called 'myths' or 'legends'. We are told different stories from the very childhood and that is the reason why they have so much impact on us.

My favourite legend is about Mulan. You may have heard about this strong, independent woman from a Disney cartoon based on a real person. The story of Mulan shows us how a person with strict family traditions can break them with the help of friends and hard work. She grew up into a great warrior who wants to save both family and country. This development of the character makes that legend my favourite.

During our lives we often meet different fairy-tales. We ^{learn} remember important things from them, for example, we learn how to deal with difficulties or about the moral. The best ^{time} way to develop a better personality is childhood and that is why we always read books to the younger ones. Let me give you an example of my sister. She is hyper-energetic most of the time and that is really exhausting. But the worst thing is that because of this energy she usually runs away while we are having a walk²⁰⁰ outside. We do not look at her for only a second and she is lost! Everything changed when she heard the story of Hensel and Gretel that were caught by the witch when they ran away from home. Now she never gets lost on the street due to being taken²⁵⁰ away by a stranger.

Just to conclude everything you have read I want to say that do not be afraid of being affected by myths you were told earlier. These lessons are the greatest things you can give people while they are growing up.

Immortality: a curse or a blessing?

Have you ever wanted to become immortal? I'm one hundred positive that you have! But one Russian tale shows that it is not that great.

This story is really ancient and it carried through our generation which is fascinating. The main hero is Koshei Immortal, as you can see from this name he literally cannot die so every opponent that he has encountered ^{has been} ~~has been~~ ~~set~~ ~~up~~ for a failure. He steals princesses all over Russia and gets them to his castle. Being described as poorly as he can be, Koshei is a complex character. His blessing and his curse are both in his immortality. He thought this ability was amazing but he was, as he later discovered, very much wrong about it. That's what highlights this character for me, he is not ordinary and predictable.

When I first found out ~~to~~ about him I was intrigued, paintings and pictures of him caught my eye and he was perfectly described as a human without a soul with only bones in him. He was a very important part of my childhood as he taught me not to judge a book by its cover, not to feel just angry regarding some people: they have emotions and motives just as we do. And that's what fairy-tales are good for and what their whole purpose is: to teach ~~the~~ little children basic rules in life ~~by~~ through art and overall enjoyable experience. For instance, Baba Yaga teaches you ~~to be~~ ~~to~~ to be careful with nature and to not trust random people, leshiy educates you about going alone to some places that are not safe, Koshei shows that immortality is a true curse and that every person is way more complex than you think.

gr All in all, fairy-tales are essential in childrens' education as it teaches a lot in an enjoyable form. ~~Read fairy-tales to learn more basic rules!~~ Read them to your kids: it will help them a great deal. 337

Thought Of It?

Undoubtedly, everyone read or at least heard different fairy-tales while being a child. Now by many of us they are considered to be made up special for small children, not for adults. However, haven't you thought of how these stories affect our character and develop us mentally? So I'm going to tell you about it.

Let's remember a famous fairy-tale called 'Tsarevna-lyagushka'. The tsar decides to marry his three sons. They let off the arrows and the girls who catch them must be their wives. The arrow of the third son, Ivan, is caught by frog, who then turns into a beautiful girl Vasilisa. It turns out that an unkind wizard made her an animal and in the daylight she becomes a frog. Vasilisa successfully does ~~at~~ tsar's tasks, making all people amazed. Ivan burns her frog skin and then regrets doing it as the girl disappears. However, he bravely goes in search of his wife and manages to find her despite all difficulties.

Actually, it's one of my favourite stories as it teaches that when you meet somebody his appearance isn't very important and you had better pay more attention to his internal world.

This idea is widely used nowadays. For example, when people have a job interview how they look isn't interesting, because the employee needs his skills. Also when people make friends it sometimes happens ~~to~~ so that at first glance they find each other entirely different, but after communicating they can find many common things.

All in all, I think different stories told us in childhood have the aim not only to attract, but also teach us. They are very essential in forming our character. Remember that in any fairy-tale there is a grain of truth.

The book brought you up!

What did you read in your childhood? Were your books scientific and boring? Pretty sure you've grown up on interesting educational tales that made you who you are!

It is not a secret that parents tell their children kind enthralling tales teaching how to behave yourself, how to tell the difference between "the dark" and "the light" side. These are usually comprehensive national fairy tales, legends and myths. Undoubtedly, all the books children listen to or read by themselves can not do but leave a deep print on their future personality.

Have you ever seen "authentic" Russian people? Their cold personality, braveness, stamina and hospitality were formed by Russian folklore. Do you remember "Zmey Gorynych", a giant 3-headed dragon-like creature? It made Russian people brave and serious. If they'd been cowards, being taken aback by a mystical Zmey, they would not have defeated it. "Baba - Yaga", an old witch living in a "house - chicken" and "Koshchey" with everlasting life teach Russians to be sly and clever enough to prevent themselves from tricky moves taken by enemies. Also in tales men are depicted as strong, well-built warriors such as "Ilya Muromets" or "Dobryna", whereas women are described as smart, attractive beauties with good cooking and parenting skills.

Reading these fascinating works, children try to act likewise. All these characters influence on Russians.

My favourite legend is one about knyaz Igor, with will power, fighting against pelovtsy nomads. Being a person who's interested in History, I find this book breath-takingly exerting, spurring to read more.

Last but not the least, people always adopt special features from book characters that win respect. One story can form a whole nation. I believe, people, especially parents, should pay attention to what book they opt for.

A wise thought for younger generations.

Since the beginning of times people have been making up different fairy-tales, legends and myths. Most of the time such stories ~~are~~ based on unreal events, but they always have ~~a~~ some kind of a philosophical meaning that can have an impact on forming person's character.

Almost every person has a favourite fairy-tale. As for me, ever since being a child I've always been enjoying reading a story called "The Golden fish". It's about an old woman who's husband has caught the fish and in order to thank him for then letting ~~he~~ it free, the fish has promised to make his any wish come true. At first an old woman was asking for quite simple things, but gradually her wishes grew more grand. Eventually the fish's patience has come to an end when an old woman has asked for the fish to make her the Queen of the sea. The fish got so mad that it left old people with nothing. In my opinion, it's a great fairy-tale that shows how being too greedy and ungrateful can leave you completely broke.

As many of us know, every fairy-tale must contain some kind of a life-lesson. By reading or listening to such stories people are analysing them making notes in their minds. Of course that kind of information is crucial in shaping someone's personality, as the morals that they contain can find the usage even in our time.

In conclusion I want to say that the importance of fairy-tales, legends and myths in forming people's character is undeniable. No matter how much time will pass, ²⁴⁰ stories with all the past generations' wise thoughts will always be relatable and useful for our everyday life.

~~The~~ ^{The} Truth about Fairy-tales, which are forming our characters.

In modern society, with its own concerns, troubles and interests it is hard to find some leisure time to think about something so ~~more~~ stupid (on the first sight) as fairy-tales. But, do they really so ~~useful~~ useless as it is common to think?

In my childhood I heard fairy-tales very often. Almost every night my grandfather used to ~~read~~ ^{read} ~~me~~ ^{aloud} any of them. And, frankly speaking, the most pleasant memories of my life are related with this time. Me and my grandpa had in common only one thing — our favorite fairy-tale ~~writer~~ ^{writer} was A.S. Pushkin. In my opinion, the best ~~part~~ Pushkin's fairy-tale is "Golden Cock". It has very captative story line, interesting plot and almost latent philosophic meaning.

I really believe that fairy-tales are very important in forming our character. I know it, because the most significant example of its positive impact is me. I did learned a lot of things that helped me in my adult life. The morality and deep sense that every fairy-tale is included, prepare kids, who are reading them, to an adult life, with its difficulties, concerns and "tasks", one will have to "solve". ^{VPK} Moreover, a good, educative fairy-tale develops children's imagination.

This fact should be taken into account, because it boosts their thinking skills and many other human's abilities, connected with "mind powers". The kid, who reads a lot, usually smarter and has "better behavior" than the one who ^{VPK} doesn't. The provings of this fact, we can observe almost every there!

So, to sum up, all the mentioned above, I'd like to say that fairy-tales should be read. The positive impact that they have on a kid's mind, thinking skills and imagination isn't overrated. 273

"Beautiful soul from a crib"

VP

When we ask a person what has made an impact on his personality, we know what to expect from ~~them~~ - education, travelling are common answers. But have you ever thought that character forms right from the crib when mother is entertaining her child with a wonderful fairy-tale? Fairy-tales, legends, myths are created with a view to draw people's attention to everyday problems, but the perk is that they are made in unique way, which is full of miracles and magic. So, fairy-tales are suitable for children.

From my personal experience, I am eager to admit that my attitude towards different life situations, as well as personality has changed for the better, thanks to my favourite fairy-tale named "Morozko". When I read it in childhood, I was utterly delighted by the magical tricks of Santa Claus and bewildered because of the unfair actions of the naughty stepmother of the principal character Nastenka. When devouring the pages, I learnt to be kind no matter what can happen and to believe in love.

The lessons I have got thanks to this story are common ones that people get by reading folk masterpieces. A child's personality is most liable to be successfully influenced on, so by encouraging him to read ~~the~~ folklore stories parents make him a good person. For instance, my brother learnt from "Morozko" not to be greedy for his entire life because my parents told him about the importance of reading the book.

The best way to change for the better is to start doing it in childhood. Undoubtedly, they make a huge impact on people's personality and foster learning new things.

Heritage of Russia

In modern world where science is leading fairy-tales and legends can be called childish. Why do we need to believe in these legends instead of developing archeology? Definitely, it shows the history of the country. It also helps us to connect between generations. Moreover, science cannot show us what the thoughts of people were like. That is why today I want to accustom you to myths, legends and fairy-tales of my country. We can see how they has shaped the characters of people and what effect they have had on daily routine.

First of all, I would like to talk about my favourite fairy-tale. There were 3 strong men that bravely protected the country because of their strength, boldness. This fairy tale helps us remember who the heroes of our country are and also encourage people to fight, achieve what they want no matter what.

I think that fairy tales help a lot in daily routine. When we realize how brave our ancestors are, we get the energy to do things. Also it is important to point out that fairy-tales are often used when you bring up a child. They are interesting and easy to comprehend, so child will know the history of the country. Legends are a good way to learn history and prepare for exams. There is a fairy-tale about a character who ran away from home and was eaten. It shows us that children need to be near parents because our world is full of dangers.

In conclusion, I would like to say that legends,

Fairy-tales, myths have a huge impact on our life. That is why we need to make efforts to preserve them and share with people.
