PART 1. READING COMPREHENSION. Maximum: 20 points.

TASK 1.1. Read the text and answer the questions (1-10). Transfer your answers to the answer sheet.

Languages

Talking is the most common way for us to communicate, but the language we use can depend on where we live, who we're talking to and what we're trying to say. Some languages are spoken widely, and some are spoken by only a few people. There is even a language called Silbo Gomero spoken on La Gomera of the Canary Islands that's made up entirely of whistles!

There are roughly 6,500 spoken languages in the world today. However, about 2,000 of those languages have fewer than 1,000 speakers. If you were able to learn a new language every week, it would still take you 125 years to learn all 6,500!

There are lots of languages spoken around the world, but the most common first language is Mandarin, with more than 1,000,000,000 people using it as their main language. Most of those are in China and Taiwan, but Mandarin is quickly becoming a common second language for people to learn. You may even know a few words already!

Spanish and English are the next two most popular, with English being used as a way for many different countries to communicate. For example, when French people do business with people from Belgium, they'll usually use English when speaking to each other. It's also the common language for pilots from around the world, they use it when talking to airports or each other over the radio.

Some countries have one official language that almost everyone speaks, while other countries might have two or more main languages. At least half the people in the world speak more than one language. In Canada, for example, French and English are both national languages, and many areas speak both fluently. Here is a fun fact about Canada. The name Canada comes from the word 'kanata' which means 'settlement' or 'village' in the language of the indigenous St Lawrence Iroquoians.

Some languages have a lot in common, and that's because many years ago they came from a common parent language. For example, the Danish, Swedish, Norwegian and Icelandic languages are all similar as they were once part of the ancient Germanic region. Just like the Latvians and the Lithuanians were once Baltic people. Overtime people started pronouncing similar basic words differently. So if you know, one language, it can be a little easier to learn another one from a similar language family. You may surprise yourself at how quickly you can pick it up.

We learn our first language as children, but learning a second language can be difficult. If you want to learn a new language, the best way is to have someone to practice with. If they know the language, that's even better. If not, you can practice together. This is also great when you're travelling. Try to use the local language whenever you can, you'll get better at it very quickly, and the locals will appreciate the effort.

Task 1.2. Read the text and complete each gap (11-20) with ONE WORD.

My cousin Tom would make a wonderful doctor! He's still at school at the moment, and he hasn't decided (11) what he wants to do, but I really hope that he chooses (12) to study medicine and become a doctor.

Tom has got everything you need to (13) be + a doctor. He's very intelligent, so (14) if + people came to him with unusual symptoms, he would be able to use his knowledge and decide how to treat them. He's also calm, so he (15) wouldn't panic if people were seriously ill, and he would be good (16) at + reassuring patients if they were frightened. Tom also has personal qualities which allow him to get on (17) contact with everyone. He's very friendly and outgoing, (18) so + his patients would like him. Most importantly, he really cares about people and wants to help them. This is what being a doctor is all about!

Tom definitely gets my vote (19) as — the perfect doctor. I'm (20) going to keep trying to persuade him that he should choose this career path when he leaves school. Fingers crossed!

My memories from the time together with my class. P

I can easily say that without my class it would be really boring to go to school. These people are probably the most fun, loud and brave people I've met, the real party animals. I would like to share two stories that I can remember from my time together with my class.

The first story that comes to my mind is when we went on a bus trip to another city. I can't help but miss the moments when we all sang popular songs and took funny pictures around the city. Also, we visited a bunch of museums, and everytime I looked at any of my classmates, I knew for sure that we must be having quite the same thoughts. It's always pleasant to feel that you definitely belong among these people. lex

Secondly, I remember us going to a theme park. It is quite funny that everytime me and my class rush to the cafe or a store in the first place. I will never forget making funny faces and taking photos with my class. everyone. Then we were encouraging each other to try different activities, such as riding a unicycle or trying out unique ice-cream flavors. It is a core memory of mine, I suppose. Because to do these things was easier said than done!

I hope you got the picture of how much I love spending time with my class, even though I'm always a kind of doubting Thomas among them. I hope that we'll be able to make a lot of other memories together and I will get the chance to share them again.
